Hackettstown, NJ, USA - February 24, 2009 – Contemporary jazz guitarist and composer B.D. Lenz comes into his own with a new album, Hit It and Quit -- reaching new heights not only with his performance but with his writing as well. B.D. Lenz will release his sixth CD featuring an award-winning rhythm section. Taking a departure from past recordings, Lenz plays only one song with his working band, while recording the rest of the album with The Late Show's bassist Will Lee, world-renowned drummer Joel Rosenblatt, and musician/actor Nick Rolfe.

His fourth project with Apria Records, Lenz said the record was originally started with drummer, Joel Rosenblatt in mind, "making me write in a different way." Never playing with Lee and Rosenblatt until they met at world-class recording studio, Cove City Sound Studios, was a first for B.D. Of their sessions he says, "They were total pros...absolutely inspiring...and after a few takes completely nailed it."

The track, H-Town, brings another first to the composer side of Lenz making his initial attempt at writing for and featuring a horn section. "It adds a different color to my music...something I haven't done before," says Lenz. Lenz also plays his first-ever solo guitar tune in Truth is a Temple, calling it, "impressionistic."

Something for Everyone

From novice listener to jazz aficionado, this record calls out to every listener in fresh, vibrant and colorful ways. Creating rich emotional textures using smooth jazz, contemporary jazz, funk and fusion, rock and blues. Hit It and Quit strikes an ideal balance between straight ahead to heavily-arranged jazz. Lenz' layering of sound also allows you to discover something new each time you listen. The title track, Hit It and Quit, is a "good barometer" of where the CD is at -- "melodic, funky and fun."
